Uniting the Community—Stefania Wheeler, Northwest Director of Donor Development for United Way of West Tennessee, explained how United Way advocates for equity through uniting agencies in ways that improve each person's access to health, education, and financial stability. She shared personal stories of how United Way helped her and said that "The 211 Hub" (wtn211.org) is a first stop in finding assistance with needs related to medical concerns, housing and utilities, food, employment, education, disability and mental health, abuse, and more. "One can find help and get help," she said. She also said that the Jackson Financial Empowerment Center offers professional one-on-one financial counseling to anyone in West Tennessee for free. Stephanie's dynamic presentation underscored the importance of United Way resources as she encouraged everyone to share information and to give, advocate, and volunteer.

Of special interest to Kiwanis members is the introduction through United Way of Frazier's Book Bus in the summer of 2024. Our club donated books to the After School Program during the "Covid year" as well as provided biographical books (ranging from Jane Goodall to Jackie Robinson) to the K-Kids program.
